

5 THINGS YOUR VENDOR ASSESSMENT ISN'T TELLING YOU

63% of companies don't have plans to update third party risk assessments on an ongoing basis.

If you're relying only on one-time assessments...

...you risk missing critical information about your vendors that can affect the security of your systems and your data.

WHAT'S NOT COVERED DURING A ONE-TIME VENDOR ASSESSMENT?

1

Operational Vendor Business Activity

Mergers and acquisitions, expansions, divestitures, contractions, layoffs, and senior leadership changes will place stress on your vendors, their people, controls, and processes – which increases information security risk.

2

Legal Threats and Regulatory Actions

You deserve to know if your vendor is undergoing class action lawsuits, IP cases, sanctions, regulatory investigations, or other legal actions that affect how and whether or not you choose to do business with them.

3

Brand and Reputation Issues

Employee morale is stressed when a vendor confronts brand and reputational challenges, hurting security awareness...which increases the probability of successful phishing and breach activity.

4

Data and Security Events

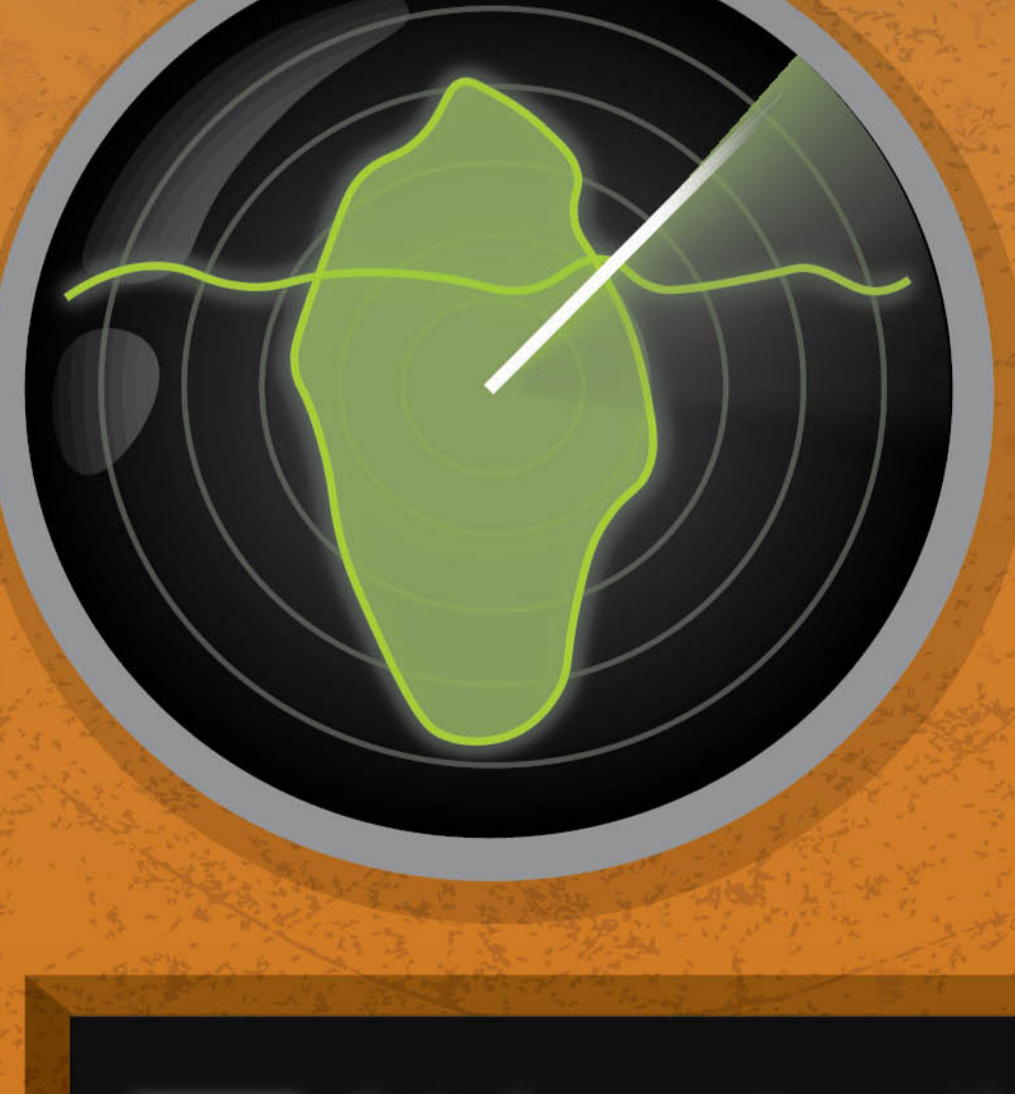

If your vendors experience a data breach or security incident, they could experience business interruptions that affect your operations. Or worse, their hackers could become your hackers – gaining access to your systems and data.

5

Financial Stability

Missing financial goals, capital changes, and bankruptcies can all be signs of deteriorating long-term viability and signal decreasing investment in information security controls to combat today's rapidly evolving threats.

PREVENT ISSUES FROM BECOMING INCIDENTS. GET THE COMPLETE PICTURE WITH CONTINUOUS THREAT MONITORING.

It's critical to know which vendors are prepared for today's business and cyber threat environment. Continuous Threat Monitoring provides a holistic view of the ongoing internal and external events that can affect the security postures of your vendors.
